A triumph in positive affirmations

By Riane D. Capalad
riane.capalad@mvariety.com

Working with dozens of customers within the week, Pacifica Insurance Claims Adjuster and Account Executive Janel V. Pangelinan earned success in her career by focusing on honesty and effective communication.

When ask about the importance of successful business relationship, Janel believes that effective communication and honesty are the answers.

Her ability to adapt and willingness to get the job well done are her strongest attributes in accomplishing certain purposes and overcoming obstacles in life.

Janel is very open to her opinions when it comes to valuing and creating more female leaders in the industry.

"I'd like to see more companies value their female employees as we do by providing more leadership opportunities, professional development, and for promotional opportunities and also for women to be aware of their value and ask for those opportunities" she said.

Sharing what she believes women bring to the work table, she believes sincerity plays a big role.

> "We need to put aside a minute each day for positive affirmations, to credit ourselves of our daily accomplishments whether it was big or small."

"Sensitivity and sincerity. Women naturally are nurturing and will want to see progress and growth. They treat any situation, large or small, with delicacy and find pride in the work they do and their accomplishments," Janel noted.

She also talks about facing one's fears and trusting their own abilities.

"The only person that gets in our way of success is our self. We are our worst critics and often focus on negativity and everything we did wrong," she points out. "We need to put aside a minute each day for positive affirmations, to credit ourselves of our daily accomplishments whether it was big or small."

Cultivating goals with confidence

By Riane D. Capalad
riane.capalad@mvariety.com

With a soft smile and determined outlook, Pacifica Insurance Broker Department Supervisor and Marketing Coordinator Samatha Sikayun approaches her work goals and customer service with confidence and attention to detail.

She believes the natural traits of women complement the work that she and her team delivers at the islands' leading and most reliable insurance company.

"We bring diversity, effective communication skills, emotional intelligence and warmth to the workplace," says Samantha.

With over four years of experience as an Underwriter and Marketing Coordinator at Pacifica Insurance Underwriters, Samantha targets her goals with perseverance that aligns with the ethical principles in the work place.

Dealing with clients may be a tough challenge for Samantha, nonetheless, she tries to give her best effort in providing high quality service to customers.

With that, she strongly upholds

> "My hope is that the future workplace cultivates an environment where women feel confident in their own abilities and what they can bring to the table."

confidence as the main ingredient to overcome any challenges ahead.

In the words of Nora Ephron, she shares, "Above all, be the heroine of your life, not the victim."

"My hope is that the future workplace cultivates an environment where women feel confident in their own abilities and what they can bring to the table," said Samantha. Above all, I hope for a future where all women, regardless of race; culture; or current station in life, feel unlimited in the pursuit of their dreams and aspirations."

Valuing empowerment and encouragement

Christie Sablan-Keptot and Anthea Joy Baltazar

As housekeeping manager and a department head at Hyatt Regency Saipan, Christie Sablan-Keptot's day begins with a briefing with her team.

Throughout the years, this routine has turned into a venue for her and her housekeeping family to brainstorm and go through the rigors, demands and expectations from their profession—all in ensuring the company's theme, "We Care For People, So They Can Be Their Best."

And one essential aspect that she and her team has learned from each other is to value each other's ideas, putting greater emphasis on empowerment and engagement.

"Our work or business relationships are important to sustain and I honestly know that sincerity and trust factors are essential between partners," opines Sablan-Keptot. "It is like being best friends with someone: you have to be able to honestly communicate and understand each other and other's needs."

"Things are never perfect and are

Fueling happiness and passion at work

Hyatt Regency Saipan Kili Café & Terrace and Room Service Manager Anthea Joy Baltazar, shares her wonderful yet challenging experience on how her profession had influenced her through the years.

"I have been with Hyatt for 16 years and counting. My career at Hyatt Regency Saipan, started as a wait staff of six years and worked my way up to where I am at currently. I got the opportunity to work on the largest division of the hotel, the room service, food, and beverage division. I've grown personally and professionally and I thank Hyatt for taking CARE of me since day one!" said Joy.

According to Joy, managing the whole room, food, and beverage service requires clear sets of goals and expectations.

The Value of Helping Others

Her advice to women in the CNMI, "Take advantage of the freedom that women have here in the CNMI because in other countries, even today, women don't have the same freedom we do," Geri DelaCruz says, who credits her mother for instilling in her the value of helping others.

"My mother, Margaret C. DelaCruz, possesses many characteristics of a strong woman. Although challenged several times in her life, my mother always held strong in her values of faith, respect and integrity. This, she continues to do in our family. I am very fortunate to still have my mother around and witness her growth. During her career at the Public School System, she climbed the ladder of leadership from being a teacher, to working in Special Education, to overseeing the Transportation Department (which consisted predominantly of men) and later the Assistant Commissioner of Administration - all the while helping others along the way!" Geri says.

Geralyn Cabrera Dela Cruz, fondly known as Geri, returned to the CNMI eight years ago after living in Hawaii for over 11 years.

"I always knew that I was going to return home someday. I was just waiting for the right time. Ironically, I felt the right time was when the government was financially strapped. I entered the government at the time the 64 hour pay period was implemented," she says, but maintained her resilience and belief in building a better community. "This was the time my community needed me the most. I moved home with the determination to make a better CNMI."

One way in which Geri fulfilled her purpose is through volunteerism.

Geri grew up on Saipan, spent most of her summers on Rota, and graduated from Academy of Our Lady of Guam, an all-girls college preparatory institution.

Immediately following high school, she continued on to her undergraduate studies at Chaminade University of Honolulu earning a Bachelor of Science in Biology.

"Although I earned my educational credits in Biology, like any college graduate after graduation, I needed to find work. I ended in real estate, which I thought was only going to be temporary. My real estate chapter was for a good six years. I worked in Property Management managing office buildings and commercial shopping centers in Honolulu. It was through this career that I learned management skills and the importance of helping others. The companies I worked for were huge donors to various charities. In 2011, I returned to the CNMI and worked for the Department of Public Works in the Federal Highway program. I handled environmental clearances for all road projects funded through the Federal Highway program," she says. "But, whenever I can volunteer to help others, I found a way to squeeze it into my schedule."

Geralyn Cabrera Dela Cruz

Presently, Geri DelaCruz serves as the Senior Director of Imperial Pacific International's Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR), where she is responsible for carrying out the company's social responsibility strategies, developing and implementing programs that create positive impact in our community.

She is also the Vice President for the Lady Diann Torres Foundation (LDTF), a non-profit organization that focuses in promoting access to advancement and assistance programs to individuals with special needs in the CNMI, preserving our indigenous cultures through Chamorro and Carolinian language literacy initiatives, and assisting in providing basic resources to individuals in the CNMI to maintain a better quality of life.

First Lady Diann Tudela Torres, President of her foundation, highlights that Geri has played a key role in the foundation's successes and its continued outreach to several underserved people in the community.

"It was through my volunteer work at LDTF that I was seen as a potential to lead the CSR department, given the company's desire to contribute and assist the islands with immediate relief and recovery from Typhoon Soudelor," Geri says.

Through her leadership, CSR effectively initiated the Village Pride Project, improving different villages and public facilities on Saipan, Tinian, and Rota that were damaged from the storm.

When asked about her thoughts on the importance of gender balance in our community as we celebrate CNMI Women's Month,

BALANCE FOR BETTER LEAD-HER-SHIP

Together with Diann and Wella, we celebrate and recognize the numerous contributions of women throughout the CNMI this whole month of March.

Today is International Women's Day, a celebration of the historic contributions women have made to the growth and strength of the Northern Mariana Islands in countless recorded and unrecorded ways. Women have been at the forefront in the establishment of early charitable, philanthropic, and cultural institutions.

As a matrilineal society, our ancestors have always valued the important role women play in our everyday lives. In this evolving modern society, their position in our villages continues to evolve with many taking on leadership roles and standing up for important issues that affect not only women, but our community as a whole.

This year, we continue to celebrate the economic, educational, political, and social achievements of women past, present, and future. We join the international call for improved gender balance which is essential for economies and communities to thrive. Let us continue to empower our daughters, sisters, and mothers to become masters of their own destiny.

Harnessing Honesty and Empathy

By Riane D. Capalad
riane.capalad@mvariety.com

Born and raised in Tokyo, Japan, Sachiko Mafnas has come a long way on the journey of her extensive career.

After earning her degree in Tokyo, she moved to Saipan in 1996 at a young age of 23. She began working for Aqua Resort Club Saipan as a Guest Relations Officer in 1999, and quickly climbed the ranks to Front Office Manager, Director of Operations, and is now Aqua Resort Club Saipan's first female Assistant General Manager.

Aside from developing her extensive career, Sachiko continues to be an active member of the Hotel Association of the Northern Mariana Islands (HANMI), Japanese Society of Saipan, and spends her leisure time volunteering in helping schools and sport organizations.

Now, Sachiko is happily married with three children and still continues her hard work in achieving her goals.

As the Assistant General Manager of Aqua Resort Club, having greater responsibilities is nothing new to her. Running overall daily operations, Sachiko is always committed in getting the job done. She personally works with each department and is always ready and willing to step in wherever needed.

Sachiko Mafnas

With her outstanding qualities of being an optimistic and open-minded leader, her efforts are essential in ensuring the entire operation runs smoothly as a whole.

"Successful business relationships are built on mutual commitment and communication. Whether the relationships are with superiors, associates, vendors, or employees, I respect each one the same," she said. Her empathy really sets her aside, and her ability to put herself in the mindset of others eases situations and earns the trust of others.

When she initially moved to Saipan, the cultural differences were a slight challenge, but her positive outlook helped her adapt quickly and gain a true appreciation of a multicultural workplace and community. Now, her open lines of communication and honest approach with all associates create a healthy work environment and promote teamwork, and everyone knows her door is always open to all.

Sachiko continues to empower women capabilities not only in the workplace but also in the community.

"I believe that women are more easily adaptable to different situations and challenges, which makes them stronger in problem solving and finding various solutions. Women approach situations with a more personal touch, and make operations run more smoothly," she commented.

In addition, she exemplifies the understandings of womanhood as being positive, confident, motivated, honest, diligent, and having an open-mind.

"I hope to see a new generation of empowered women who feel confident in leading at work and in the community, while maintaining a healthy work-life balance," she smiled.

Creating a nurturing work environment

–what makes the workplace culture successful.

By Riane D. Capalad
riane.capalad@mvariety.com

"I believe all women have the innate qualities to nurture others; qualities that best describe mothers. We are all "mothers" who spend a great deal of our time and energy motivating, supporting, comforting, and loving those around us – home and in the workplace. These qualities are the foundation of who we are as women and how we present ourselves to the world. We create a nurturing work environment that makes the workplace culture successful. We should embrace these qualities and be proud of our make-up," says Micah Parico-Acuavera Executive Assistant, Triple J Saipan, Inc. as an inspirational message to all women especially to those stepping into to the professional workforce.

Micah, daughter of two Philippine immigrants moved to Saipan along with her family in 1991. "Saipan is our home. My mother retired from the Public-School System (PSS), my father from a private company. Both my parents are buried here."

Micah Parico-Acuavera

> "Women are capable of balancing many disciplines, analyzing and developing skills and cultivating others whether at home or in the workplace."

With a bachelor's degree of Science in Foreign Service from Lyceum of the Philippines University, Micah was offered a position at Triple J Saipan, Inc. to support the Chief Executive Officer (CEO) and Chairman of the Board, Robert H. Jones – a position few are successful in. For over fourteen (14) years, Micah grew to share the values of loyalty, passion and professional drive of Mr. Jones, and,remains is his Executive Administrative Assistant to this day while aiding and supporting the overall human resources administration of the organization. "She is an extension of Mr. Jones, and, as a critical thinker, Micah is able to step-in and provide our managers direction enabling them to get the job done," Frank Ada Human Resources Director, Triple J Saipan, Inc.

Happily married to Jess Acuavera with his two boys, Caleb– 4 years and Eli – 3 years, Micah says, "I am blessed to be where I am today with a healthy family and productive and challenging workplace."

Throughout her 14 years at Triple J Saipan, Inc. Micah worked through challenging situations which she describes has molded her into an empathetic and graceful professional. She remains flexible, keeps an open mind and focuses on solution-oriented results.

Maria Valentina Haberman, Marketing Manager, Triple J Saipan, Inc. praises Micah for her critical-thinking skills as well as fostering a balanced work environment."Just as mothers are said to be the glue that holds the everything together, Micah is the glue that holds our Triple J Saipan family together. Whether one may need to simply vent, seek direction or need support, Micah provides us the assistance in a manner with care – a quality that cannot be taught; a quality she inherently shares," Haberman says.

"Women are capable of balancing many disciplines;analyzing and developing skills; and, cultivating others whether at home or in the workplace. As I mentioned earlier, as women we should embrace these qualities and be proud of our make-up because we create a nurturing work environment that makes the workplace culture successful," said Micah Parico-Acuavera, Executive Administrative Assistant, Triple J Saipan, Inc.

Moving with purpose and determination

Her love for education ignited her pursuit in public service through public education, culminating with her election as the Chairwoman of the 16th CNMI Board of Education (with the distinction as the youngest to hold such position) and her passion for business earned her a nomination for the 2018 Saipan Chamber of Commerce Business Person of the Year as IT&E Customer Service and Government Relations Manager.

Janice Marie Ada Tenorio defines a woman who realized her dreams— and, how she epitomizes a rare combination of a woman an leader, that excels with both public service and private sector engagements.

With drive, commitment, and dedication, Janice believes that these characteristics are the principles in achieving one's goals.

It's a tough balancing act for her: leading the CNMI BOE – the governing and policymaking-body of the CNMI Public School System – and high expectations from her duties with IT&E.

But she does it with purpose, commitment and determination.

Janice Marie Ada Tenorio

> "My hope is for more women leaders to be able navigate the complexities of our fast-changing, moving global environment and to maintain our competitiveness or being ambitious. And in so doing, we will be able to continually work side by side for a better future."

The school district is home to close to 11,000 public elementary, middle and high school students spread throughout 20 campuses in Rota, Tinian and Saipan, and over1,000 teaching and non-teaching staff.

IT&E is the largest telecommunication's provider in the Pacific region.

"These attributes drive our team towards success. Also, in particular, it also gives a boost to my relationship, knowledge and understanding of our island community, with which my company,IT&E, is a proud corporate partner," she humbly said.

In exemplifying women's potential to prosperity, Tenorio embraces and espouses abilities of a strong, passion women leaders.

"We are balanced thinkers, natural in communicating, managing stress and are critical to details, among others," Tenorio notes.

She adds, "My hope is for more women leaders to be able navigate the complexities of our fast-changing, moving global environment and to maintain our competitivenessor being ambitious. And in so doing, we will be able to continually work side by sidefor a better future."

As the Customer and Government Relations Manager of IT&E, she is credited for the telecom firm's continued growth as a partner to the commonwealth and its people. Her particular role with IT&E has led to the success of IT&E in meeting its commitment to the CNMI community: a local company that puts greater emphasis in the promotion of local capacity and economic growth.

Throughout the years, IT&E has provided much needed economic lifeline to families in the community and continue to do as such until today.

On the other hand, as an elected member of the CNMI Board of Education, she mirrors the profound love for public education by supporting the initiatives of the Commissioner of Education in meeting the school district's goals in providing for equal and quality education opportunities to the children of the commonwealth.

From local legends, to our modern day heroes, we celebrate the progress and achievements of women as we continue to strive and encourage diversity and equality in all our companies and the communities we serve.

Coloring lives with creativity

With three years of experience in painting, Meena Benavente is creating a massive voice for the community by her work of arts.

Benavente holds a Bachelor's degree in Elementary Education and finished her Masters in Library Science at University of North Texas.

She is now working as a student librarian at San Vicente Elementary School.

Now, she runs the Rustic Plumeria organization with her project, Unwind, which gives people leeway in expressing themselves through painting without fear of judgment.

She also shares the intensity of her comfort every time she draws and paints on wood, pointing out," I paint anything that my soul wants to express. I love how wood adds depth to what I do. The smell and texture gives a magical feeling."

Benavente's paint session has really helped her cope up with her anxiety. "The joy I see on the artists' faces during our paint sessions is an amazing feeling - that is the solution to my anxiety."

Her strong drive has led her to different experiences, which made her think and worry less from negativity.

This eagerness has brought her to build programs freely for the school library, her artworks, and paint classes.

She believes that people are amazingly equal, and that there should be fairness between men and women building a stronger and united community in the future.

"I am blessed to live in this generation. We see men and women cooking together, men and women working together. We see men and women raising our children together," said Meena.

Therefore, her passion to advocate self love and freedom of expression sends a greater message to all women of all ages.

Her advice to this generation is to never let one's potential stop, learn to love one self, and let one self's potential grow endlessly.

Navigating with leadership and devotion

"Women were the first navigators"

Emma Perez has devoted over 30 years of her life to working in non-profits. She is currently the Co- Founder and Board President of 500 Sails, a nonprofit organization dedicated to the cultural revival of maritime traditions here in the Marianas. Being a half Chamorro raised in California as an islander, she exemplifies her love for the islands by giving importance to family, respect to elders, and cooking and enjoying traditional foods. She enjoys making good Lantiyas, a Chamorro pudding dessert often served at island gatherings, that her son prefers to birthday cake.

Normal days for Emma includes 5 am wake up calls to teach adult swimmers at 6am.

Class participants range from beginners to triathletes who are training for competitions. She started swimming at the age of 40, that's why she fully enjoys teaching beginners. She was also a member of the all-family, all-Chamorro "Flying Proa Relay Team" that successfully swam the English Channel in 2007. After her class, she heads back to her office to focus on administrative and program tasks with April Repeki and Sami Birmingham-Babauta. "We are a small organization, so we all wear many hats.

Emma Perez

A day might include sweeping outside the Guma Sakman, cleaning a bathroom, writing a grant, learning to sail a canoe, speaking to a school, or meeting with our leaders. Days that include being in or on the water are especially nice. I also spend a lot of time bouncing ideas around with my husband, Pete Perez. He is the 500 Sails Executive Director and Co-Founder. We work closely as a team. He is hands-on with the canoes, as well as providing the dream. I am behind the scenes administratively, the main swim teacher, and often have to act as the enforcer," she laughs.

One of the challenges they are facing is the potential loss of their two buildings, the Guma Sakman, which houses the sailing and swimming programs for 500 Sails, and the boatyard, where they build and repair canoes.

Emma walks with positivity as they try to work with the community, legislators, cabinet members, and leadership to come up with sustainable solutions to move past setbacks and continue helping the community.

She has been very passionate volunteering and working in organizations that contribute to peoples' wellbeing, especially 500 Sails. She is also fond of numbers and order; this compliments her hard working attributes in developing effective business systems.

For Emma, women are consistent and reliable not only at home but also in the workplace and they bring a nurturing kind of strength to anything they pursue.

"At home, they are project managers, chefs, teachers, and often budget managers. These skills can be applied to the workplace.

500 Sails derives its name from the visit of the Spanish galleon San Pedro to the Marianas in 1565:
"We were no more than two leagues from [the island] when fifty or sixty proas under sail surrounded the fleet. These proas were furnished with lateen sails of palm mats and were as light as the wind...The day had scarcely begun when a great number of these proas appeared about us...more than four or five hundred around the ships..."
–Legazpi aboard the San Pedro, 1565

In the community, they are the heart, and often work behind the scenes to make things right. We need to foster that even more," Emma noted.

Emma's empowering advice to women talks about facing the unknown and being mighty together as females.

"I hope for equality in the workplace. That means equal pay for equal work, and more places as executives and in government leadership. And of course, more women swimming and sailing canoes," she smiled.

Geri notes that in our community, both men and women bring their unique creativities and expertise to our workforce.

"Women contribute to the CNMI's economy as much as men do. This allows for families to have an improved standard of living, because now, there are both dad and mom contributing to incomes for families. What's even more amazing about our women in the CNMI is that we are seeing a rise of women in male dominant fields. Women are working in fields where their passion and strength lies, and not in fields that society dictates them to be. It takes both men and women to create gender balance, so in order to ensure this continues in our community, we need to teach our young boys and girls its importance," she says.

Sharing what her mother always told her, Geri advises our young girls and fellow women in society to "never settle for anything less than extraordinary, to always believe in yourself, and to work hard in whatever path you choose."

Geri shares that she spends her spare time with family, volunteering at Church or hitting the links with her golf crew.

"My faith is important to me. I was raised in a home where God is the center of our lives. I've been involved in church ministry from my younger days, whether it be singing in the choir or simply a lector at mass, it's so fulfilling," Geri says.

At the end of the day, the value of helping others is always a matter of choice, she shares, which has to come from the heart.

Girls can do anything

For International Women's Day, DreamWorks Animation is reminding girls around the world they have the power to achieve. Ambition, courage, perseverance - girls have many super powers. And these qualities, just like those of boys', are awesome.

One powerful character is She-Ra, surrounded by the Princesses of Power. Join She-Ra in fighting the good fight - and forge a #BalanceforBetter in the world.

Balance must be restored

Many girls do not yet realize the power they have.

Teacher, parents, caregivers - for International Women's Day watch the video above then access the practical She-Ra IWD Video Discussion Guide to stimulate important discussion amongst children. Help foster open mindsets in children, challenge stereotypes and bias, nurture confidence and build self-belief.

always work in progress," she notes.

For women in her field, one has to be assertive and confident. This holds true if you are in a competitive hospitality industry that relies heavily in a travel-based island economy, according to Christie.

"I am assertive and try to be confident with everything that I do. I have to set an example to my children, friends and colleagues," she says.

In additional, Christie definitely admires the strength and vigor that women manifest in the workplace and community. According to her, they are more caring and compassionate to people necessitaties.

Hoping for more leaders in the future for women, Christie shares, "I believe if you possess basic characters of integrity, honesty, loyalty, self-sacrifice, accountability and self-control, you have a good head on your shoulder that will earn you great respect in life and whatever you decide to with your career."

full support while providing high quality standard of work.

When it comes to her relationship with her job, she believes that trust is the top element in creating mutual respect and meaningful connections in the work industry.

"For challenges we encounter at work, we always see as an opportunity for us to improve and achieve as positive results of every work day. One challenge is having dissatisfied guests. We truly listen to their sentiments and we empathize as well as show that we care. We always try to put ourselves in their shoes as our guests to be able to understand them better and deliver the service beyond their expectations," she added.

Furthermore, her passion towards her job made her tougher and more assertive, stating that she honors and takes commitments seriously and enjoys what she does, "making people happy."

Despite of the obstacles she faces, she still looks forward to going to work every day. Her advice and hope for unleashing women's full potential is genuine happiness, noting that whatever you do, passion and love will take you a long way.

"Do things that makes you HAPPY! Happiness is the key to bringing out the best in each and every one of us," Joy said.

So during one of your stays or visits at Hyatt Regency Saipan, know that your positive experience is being fueled by a leader who enjoys the work that she does.

#BalanceforBetter

International Women's Day 2019 #BalanceforBetter is a call-to-action for driving gender balance across the globe as well as celebrating the social, economic, cultural and political achievements of women.

We definitely know a thing or two about balance and understand that a diversity of views, perspectives, ideas, and vision shared on equal footing only welcomes continued social and economic success of our communities, even raising the possibilities of all that we could ever dream to achieve.

Women Rising features the inspiring achievements of a fine roster of women in our communities and we applaud the dedication, compassion, hard work and leadership each continues to share at work, in the community and at home.

Balance is for the better and we join in celebrating the progress for parity and achievements of women, of all of us, for a brighter, stronger world.

Happy International Women's Day!
